AI Global Media Ltd, publisher of AI Magazine, is a British multi-platform publishing house with a global reach that offers unprecedented access to over five million CEOs, top tier professionals, and corporate decision makers in 10 countries worldwide.

Pompano Beach, FL May 4, 2022 - Mark Dobosz, Executive Director of the John Knox Village Foundation, announced that the Foundation was awarded the prestigious “Best Older Adult Philanthropic Support Organization 2022” by the Acquisition International publication team. According to Mr. Dobosz, “The John Knox Village of Florida Foundation is honored to be recognized with this international award. It is a tribute to our donors and leadership for their commitment to enhance the health, wellbeing and lifestyle of the JKV village residents. In essence, it constantly strives to make a difference. The foundation is fulfilling this goal via a plethora of means, with a primary focus upon funding and supporting programs, services and spaces that impact eight areas of wellness – physical, mental, emotional, spiritual, environmental, philanthropy and occupational.”

JKV Foundation Board Member Kit Frazer and JKV CEO Gerry Stryker

From the AI press release, “Acquisition International are delighted and honored to formally announce the results of the Non-Profit Organization Awards. Through our merit-driven initiative, AI have looked to recognize and reward those who work tirelessly within their given dedicated sector and cause. Our 2022 victors have demonstrated an award-worthy commitment to positive change, as well as striving to make a pragmatic and effective impact for those in need of their support. The Acquisition International team are committed to recognizing these organizations who work tirelessly for the well-being of others.”
